Dear MetroWest Community,

We anticipated change. As we celebrated the MetroWest Health Foundation's 25th anniversary and its many accomplishments in 2024, we knew our founding CEO would be retiring. Our second ever CEO arrived in February, and two new staff members joined the team in the fall. All of us share the foundation's commitment to improving health outcomes of all who reside in MetroWest.

During this period of transition, we've kept the foundation's critical work moving forward, making new grants and scholarships and launching important innovations, including the Health Equity Timeline featured in this report. We've held fast to the foundation's long-held values, centering health equity, listening to our community, using data to inform our work, and investing in future leaders and health system capacity.

Our foundation's greatest strength has always been our community. We rely on close relationships with our grantees and other partners, as well as the 45 residents serving on our board, grantmaking, and other committees, to keep us grounded in what matters to MetroWest residents.

Our community is what matters to us, and we remain committed to you. As we grapple with great change and uncertainty in our broader world, the foundation is ready. We will continue to work with you to meet new challenges while embracing opportunities to cultivate a stronger, healthier MetroWest.

The MetroWest Health Foundation commits to building forward from our 25-year legacy, serving as a source of stability, continuity, and future-facing ideas for our community.

Building on 25 Years of Impact

OUR PROUD 25-YEAR LEGACY

Since 1999, MetroWest Health Foundation has supported hundreds of nonprofits and municipal agencies to build a more resilient, healthy, and equitable MetroWest. As an independent health philanthropy, we work as a grantmaker, convener, thought leader, and ally to cultivate innovative ideas and stronger health systems in our region.

We believe in the power of dialogue and sustained partnership. Across all our work, we're guided by data, rigorous research, and the voices of our community.

Introducing the Foundation Team

Phillip González
President & CEO

With a long career in health philanthropy, Phillip has been a national leader in advocating for equity, dialogue, and community partnership in the field. He's thrilled to bring that experience to an organization that he considers a model of effective community-centered philanthropy.

Rebecca Donham
Senior Program Officer

A lifelong MetroWest resident, Rebecca has supported the foundation's grantees and grant selection processes for two decades. With a background in evaluation and nonprofit capacity-building, she emphasizes transparency and rigor in grant selection and serves as a thoughtful partner to grantees.

Angela Castrillo Vilches
Program Officer

A native of Framingham, Angela brings a background in political organizing and immigrant health advocacy to her new role. She believes in centering the needs of the community in grantmaking and program decision-making. Angela is excited to apply that passion in her home region.

Maria Panasian
Director of Administration and Finance

Maria comes to the foundation with extensive experience in finance, accounting, and human resource leadership. A fan of details, deadlines, and efficiency, she keeps the foundation's internal operations moving in service of greater community impact.

Kate Baker
Research Director

Kate leads policy, programs, and data research for the foundation. A MetroWest resident and parent, she aims to make data accessible and engaging to inform partners' work. Kate is a resource to organizations as they improve health systems and serve the region's residents.

Our staff believe deeply in our mission to improve the health and wellbeing of all who live in MetroWest.

Looking Back to Move Forward

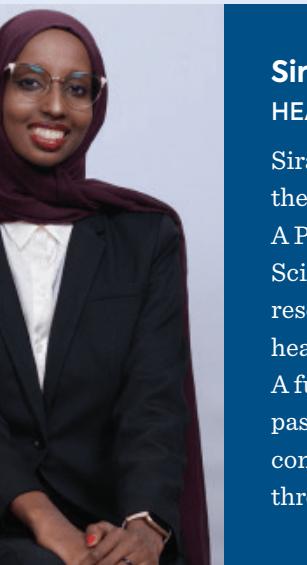

New Health Equity Timeline puts today's health experiences in historical perspective.

Last April the foundation launched an exciting tool to support MetroWest residents in understanding public health patterns in our region. The Health Equity Timeline is a free online tool that curates pivotal moments in history to help explain health disparities currently experienced by residents and inspire civic action moving forward.

Designed as an interactive community resource, the searchable timeline can be used to inform advocacy efforts, bolster fundraising, and enrich educational programs. Our team engaged dozens of community informants—including the staff of local history centers and libraries, authors, historians, and grassroots experts—to identify examples of public policy, individual leadership, acts of discrimination, and other power shifts that helped shape today's health environment. The format is deliberately iterative and continues to evolve in response to community feedback.

Sirad Hassan HEALTH EQUITY TIMELINE INTERN

Sirad has been a core contributor to the timeline project since early 2024. A PhD student in Population Health Science at Harvard, Sirad previously researched mental and reproductive health in U.S. Somali communities. A future public health leader, Sirad is passionate about engaging marginalized communities in telling their stories through participatory research.

A GLIMPSE INTO METROWEST'S PUBLIC HEALTH HISTORY

1905 >>>

Dr. Solomon Carter Fuller, the first Black psychiatrist in the U.S. and a leader in Alzheimer's disease and dementia research, returns to Westborough State Hospital to continue his groundbreaking research, despite discrimination.

1948 >>>

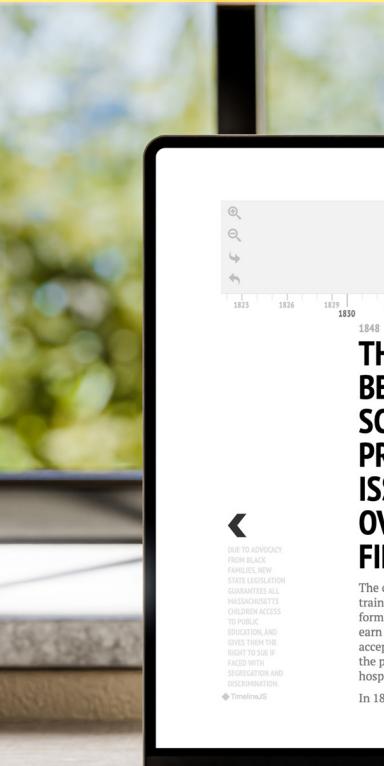

The monumental Framingham Heart Study begins, with 5,209 local subjects, all people of European American background.

1950 >>>

Natick Fair Housing Practices Committee is founded to actively work against post-WWII housing discrimination, or "redlining" practices.

"We were excited to get involved because the timeline uncovers these pivotal moments in public health history that have shaped the real-world questions people have today. By going into the experiences of the past, we can be much more ready for whatever we're encountering today and in the future."

THE BOSTON FEMALE MEDICAL COLLEGE BECOMES THE WORLD'S FIRST MEDICAL SCHOOL SPECIFICALLY FOR WOMEN, PROVIDING FORMAL EDUCATION IN ISSUES RELATING TO WOMEN'S HEALTH. OVER A DECADE LATER, IT BECOMES THE FIRST TO ADMIT A BLACK WOMAN.

The college offers a two-year program and is one of few medical schools to include OBGYN training. With the school's focus on educating women, women have greater opportunity to earn formal doctoral degrees in medicine (Dr. Elizabeth Caldwell became the first American woman to earn a doctorate degree in 1849, but applied to nearly 50 medical schools before gaining acceptance due to gender discrimination). Graduates of the college struggle to gain acceptance in the professional medical field and to be offered training or professional positions in established hospitals.

In 1860, the college becomes the first to admit a Black woman (Rebecca Lee Crumpler). The Boston

"Public health encompasses so much—the built environment, economic capital, all of the social determinants of health. This project shows how everything comes together and influences a person's health and wellbeing."

Building Forward with Our Grantees

METROWEST FOOD COLLABORATIVE

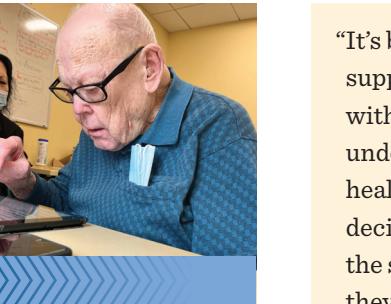

Closing gaps to food security via community-informed outreach

MetroWest Food Collaborative is developing new strategies to engage residents and increase participation in SNAP and WIC benefits in eight communities, part of its broader mission to build a more coordinated and just regional food system.

"The Foundation supported us from the beginning—not just with grant funds but with guidance. We've gotten feedback around growing and sustaining as an organization. It's been excellent, authentic advice that's helped us stay true to the mission."

Christine Guthry,
Executive Director
SPARK KINDNESS

FAMILY PROMISE METROWEST

Launching a campaign to address family homelessness in Metrowest

With resources from a new grant, Family Promise increased its reach through its diversion program from 88 to 120 families at risk of losing housing and hired a full-time advocacy specialist to identify opportunities to increase housing access and mobilize for change.

"It's been our privilege to support communities with data they can use to understand adolescent health disparities and drive decision-making about the strategies and programs they need to support adolescent mental and physical wellbeing."

Shari Kessel Schneider,
EDC Senior Project Director
METROWEST ADOLESCENT HEALTH SURVEY

OUT METROWEST

Ensuring free, affirming mental health care for LGBTQ+ youth in our community

During the pandemic, OUT MetroWest's program participants voiced a need for affirming mental health support. In response, staff secured a grant from MWHF to fund three onsite clinicians (representing different LGBTQ+ identities) who provide drop-in sessions, group support, and referrals for all youth who attend weekly programs. "They feel very seen by our therapists," says Executive Director Mel Pace. "It gives them a feeling of like, okay, I have someone to check in with no matter what's going on."

METROWEST CARE CONNECTION

Building a coordinated, people-first approach to connecting residents with the care they need

It began as bold idea: create a one-stop hub for MetroWest residents to access a range of health, behavioral health, and social services, including housing and food support. Since 2020, the partnership has served nearly 5,000 residents with multilingual care coordination. MWCC creates important "connective tissue" among the region's many providers and systems. "We're getting people together on a regular basis to talk about what's working, what's not, how we can respond as a system," says Project Director Shannon Ahern.

Sustaining a Regional Network

In 2024, the MetroWest Health Foundation distributed $5.7M in grants to 49 nonprofits and agencies that are leading the way in providing health services that improve lives and strengthen local communities.

Building Forward Together

The MetroWest Health Foundation remains steadfast in our commitment to our regional partners and MetroWest community.

In this period of great uncertainty for publicly funded health systems and service providers, our independence is an asset. We commit to ongoing support to area nonprofits and municipal agencies so they may continue to meet their missions and address emerging needs in local communities.

We invite you to connect with us in the coming year.

Whether you are a current or past grantee, or a community partner or resident, there are multiple ways to obtain valuable information and support.

- »»» Access up-to-date health data and insights on our website and through our newsletters.
- »»» Attend a convening to connect with others working to solve health challenges in our region.
- »»» Apply for a grant or scholarship in one of our upcoming selection cycles.
- »»» Contribute to the Health Equity Timeline.
